talk your head off

ATD is a successful series of moderated discussion sessions. Participants talk about a variety of issues and subjects practicing their speaking and listening skills as well as focusing on theme-oriented language and vocabulary.

Discussions are moderated by a professional teacher with proficiency-level English mastery and a natural accent who will help bring out the best in every participant.

ATD classes are only available to learners who are already at minimum upper-intermediate level to ensure the coherence of the class. Students studying at upper-intermediate, FCE, advanced, CAE, proficiency and CPE levels at English schools are welcome as are those with an IELTS speaking band of 7 or higher.

If you are an in-service teacher looking forward to practicing your English at higher levels, you will definitely find ATD the proper place for that!

original ideas

All ATD worksheets have been designed from scratch and are set to the concerns and needs of the Iranian learner. They can be accessed at www.tahasoni.co/atd.

Topics range from personal concepts like adventurism to social issues like people's attitudes towards work to abstract ideas like the anticipation of a grim future for the world.

Students will receive worksheets a week in advance to study and develop ideas to discuss with their peers.

language focus

New and interesting language points are always appreciated in discussion classes. Therefore, ATD courses emphasize the use of proper and accurate English promoting vocabulary learning and cultural exposure to the language.

Some of the worksheets include idiomatic language and new words related to the topic and you are encouraged to study a variety of resources, online and offline, to gather ideas as well as words or expressions to use when discussing your opinions.
