Future of Identification

- Why do you think it may be important for governments to easily identify citizens?
- What are the possible drawbacks to any national or international identification scheme?
- What possible methods of identification do you think will be introduced and implemented in the future? What benefits and advantages does each have?

A Grim Prospect?

- What sorts of problems may future governments face in their countries?
- Do you think people will grow a sense of international collaboration or will the world break into small communities bickering over their differences?
- Will there be wars in the future? If so, what will future wars be like? Will they be fought by humans, in the skies, on the land or in the seas?
- What can tracing a person's internet use tell the government? Do you think it is legitimate for authorities to do so? Will it be common practice in the future?
- Why do you think some people have a very bitter idea of the future of humanity? Do you share this view?

The Latest...?

- Why do you think new things are so appealing to people?
- Do you think everything new is necessarily good or better than the old one?
- What are the risks in trying a new product you have never used before? Do you usually take this risk?
